Prompt

Your next assignment...You are tasked with analyzing this poem by our school florist.

At dusk, pink bells hang like instruments waiting for breath, their flared mouths tilted skyward.Speaking songs of jazz.

The air fills with a quiet call—no sound, only knowing—as if wings had passed nearby.

By morning, the instruments rest,
and heaven keeps its silence.

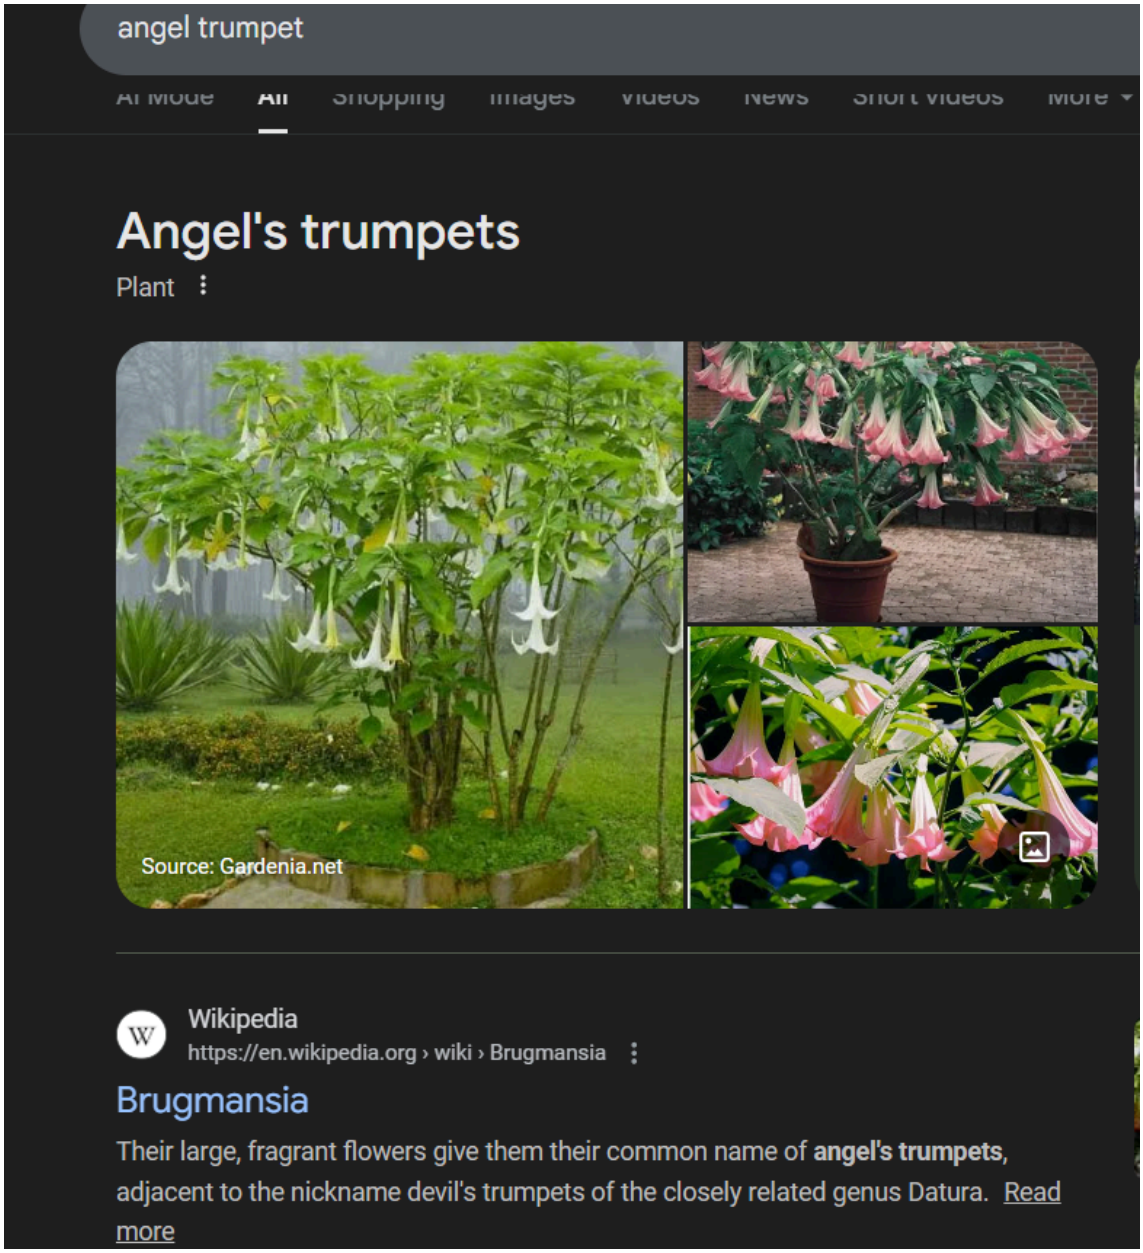
Hints

1. I wonder what the wings could be alluding to?
2. I love Louis Armstrong
3. I wonder if there’s a true name its known for

Solution

1. The competitor has to read the poem and keep in mind that the prompt includes that it is from a florist. They are trying to find hints to the name of a flower.

2. From the poem two words are to be taken from it: trumpet and angel. If you look up the name angel trumpet you will see that it is a flower!



3. From there you have to get the true name of the flower, which is brugmansia and there is your flag.
